JUDGE RESERVES DECISION

IN THE BOARDMAN CASE

Judge John H. Barnes reserved decision until Tuesday in the police court Saturday morning after hearing the case against Albert Boardman, who was arrested on Labor day night on Ferry street, where Mr. Boardman was about to hold a meeting and introduce a speaker of the socialist party.

The complaint against Mr. Boardman was drawn with three counts, alleging breach of the peace, violation of the city ordinance requiring a room and was an unauthorized public sport, exhibition or performance and violating the city ordinance relating to nuisances on highways. Prosecuting Attorney Lee Roy Robbins conducted the case against him and Attorney Harry Edlin of New Haven and Judge T. J. Kelly appeared for Mr. Boardman.

Judge Barnes ruled, after hearing the points argued, that the meeting which Mr. Boardman had proposed to hold was not the kind requiring a license within the meaning of that ordinance and he also overruled the charges of breach of the peace and the charge of violating the city ordinance relating to nuisances on highways. The complaint was made out not to be a public sport, exhibition or performance and the charges of breach of the peace and the charge of violating the city ordinance relating to nuisances on highways. The complaint was made out not to be a public sport, exhibition or performance and the charges of breach of the peace and the charge of violating the city ordinance relating to nuisances on highways.

The trial was taken up on the breach of the peace charge. Sergeant John H. Kane and Officer J. O'Neil, who made the arrest, testified that they were acting under orders from Chief George Linton and the chief testified that he had his orders from Mayor H. M. Lerou, not to allow the meeting to be held. The officers said there were about 15 people at the meeting when they made the arrest.

Mayor Lerou testified that he had refused to grant a permit for the meeting and he did not think the street proper place for such a meeting. He testified that he had told the police and mayor were within their authority in the action they had taken.

After Judge Barnes had reviewed the case he asked Mayor Lerou for his view on the matter and his Honor stated that he had told Mr. Boardman he did not want the meeting held in the street because it collected a crowd and was an obstruction. Later Mr. Boardman saw him and told him he was going to hold the meeting.

The judge reserved decision until Tuesday.

JURY FINDS CHAFFEE EVANS GUILTY

A verdict of guilty was returned by the jury in the superior court here late Saturday afternoon against Gustave J. Evans, the Groton jockey driver, on trial for manslaughter in causing the death of three persons in Groton on July 21, while driving his car with gross negligence or while intoxicated. The trial of Evans began last Wednesday afternoon.

The jury, after hearing the evidence, returned a verdict of guilty at 2:35 Saturday afternoon and they were ready with their verdict at 4, when Foreman Henry L. Allen of North Stonington reported for them that they found Evans guilty as charged. The attorneys and the court agreed to defer the pronouncement of sentence until Wednesday of this week. Court will come again on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Evans took the verdict quietly, just a slight drooping of his head for a moment, showing that he had heard, but his wife, who has been in court with the two little girls was much affected. When one of the little girls saw her mother crying she put her arm around her mother to comfort her.

Through the Evans trial the superior court had the unusual experience of a Saturday session, which Judge George E. Hinman called for in order to get through with the case last week if possible. When court came on Saturday morning at 10:45, the arguments in the Evans case were taken up after Louis Marshall, 32, of New London had been put to plea on the charge of taking a watch and $30 from John Timmons on Aug. 15 in New London. He was sentenced to four months at jail.

Attorneys Arthur T. Keef and John C. Geary, counsel for Evans, took up the morning session of court with their arguments before the jury and State Attorney Hadial A. Hull made the closing argument for the state after the noon recess. Judge Hinman gave the case to the jury at 2:35 and they were in court an hour in making his charge to them.

After the jury had been out about half an hour, they came back into the court room where Foreman Allen asked if the verdict had to be guilty or not guilty. Judge Hinman read the law to them, showing that a verdict of guilty or not guilty would be what they were required to return.

NOMINATE BROWN FOR 19TH DISTRICT SENATOR

Former Mayor Allyn L. Brown was nominated for senator in the 19th senatorial district by the republican district convention held in the town hall at 1 o'clock Saturday morning. W. S. Allen, chairman of the convention, presided and called the convention to order and Alderman Charles F. Wells of this city was elected chairman with Irving Hinman of Taftville as clerk.

The credentials committee reported that the delegates from the three towns comprising the district were present as follows:

Norwich—Edward Crooks, Charles F. Wells, Charles A. Saxton, George N. Beardow was proxy for Frank B. Richardson was proxy for William Service.

Ledyard—Isaac George Irving Hinman.

Joseph Marsan of Taftville and Whitmarsh of Hallville were elected as delegates at large.

Edward Crooks, who was nominated for senator in the 19th district, was reviewed in a speech in which he reviewed the candidate's life and public record briefly and said that he felt sure that if Mr. Brown were nominated the convention would elect him.

November, when the citizens of Norwich, Preston and Ledyard, cast their votes. When he goes to Hartford he will be heard and listened to, said Mr. Brown, and he will be heard and listened to, said Mr. Brown, and he will be heard and listened to, said Mr. Brown.

DECADE BRINGS SUCCESS

TO FAN-SIGHTED BROKER

A man and a boy stepped briskly from an office in 62 Cedar street carrying between them a roll of blueprints. They made their way to a drab building on the fringe of the financial section and then proceeded to unroll the blueprints and draped it across the structure's weather stained brick facade. Stretched taut, the canvas strip announced in large letters and letters that renting space in the building could be secured through Charles F. Noyes company.

The man who so carefully supervised the hanging of the sign was Charles F. Noyes himself.

Many things have changed since that sign was hung just a decade ago. For instance, canvas signs have more or less lost their vogue. In the real estate business, but Mr. Noyes has never lost his faith in the importance of detail. As the head of an organization which embraces some 345 employees, including all those who have charge of the buildings under his management, Mr. Noyes is almost as well acquainted with the minutiae of his business as he was in the days when his office force consisted of the boy who helped him hang the sign and one or two others.

But all this does not mean that the head of the Noyes organization is merely a detail man. He has what amount of hard work or capacity or skill or vision have given him—vision. It was vision that enabled him to foresee existing conditions in lower Manhattan and to share in the benefits of its development. It was vision plus tenacity that made him a leader in the establishment of the insurance district in William street, in the rejuvenation of Broadway in the section of Canal street and in the rebuilding of the old swamp district, in one section of which Mr. Noyes has established a permanent leather district.

More Than a Detail Man.

It was in fact the old swamp district that enabled the Noyes organization to get a foothold in the real estate business, as his company began its career in 1888 with the management of a few old-time buildings in that section. Since then he has grown to be the greatest real estate management concern in the world, with properties under its control amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars.

There were times when Mr. Noyes' ability to foresee great changes in the downtown section smacked of a sixth sense. Longer than a year ago he predicted the congestion that now exists in the lower city and advised business and financial concerns to buy their own homes in order to escape the office shortage that was bound to come. Many of them took his advice, and many others now wish they had done so.

He is a foolish prophet who fails to heed his own warning, and in that respect Mr. Noyes has proven himself doubly so.

GRISWOLD FIRST CHURCH

Joseph G. Hill, who is in his 95th year and resides with his son, Dr. B. J. Hill, at Genoa Junction, Wis., has had a flood of recollections brought back by the account of the 50th anniversary of the first Congregational church in Griswold which he read in The Bulletin. He was among the early pupils of the first Sunday school opened in the church.

GENOA JUNCTION, WIS., SEPT. 13, 1920.

The last number of your paper contains an account of the 50th anniversary of the first Congregational church in Griswold, known as the Congregational church in Pachaug. I was very much interested in it, as I was the church of my childhood. I was born and grew up in Griswold from the church and am familiar with the history of it from the time Spafford D. Jewett was its pastor. My older brother, James L. Jewett, returned from Horatio Waldo, Mr. Jewett's predecessor.

self time after time to be called an idealist and a dreamer, but who stuck to an idea against all odds and finally succeeded in selling that idea so extensively that whole trades and businesses have changed their locations.

Mr. Noyes has provided for his organization one of the finest buildings of its type in the city at a cost in excess of $300,000, including its equipment, on a lot 25x120. The building front is marble; the ground floor is marble set throughout in mahogany; a dictograph system with instruments on every desk in every department has been provided for. New mahogany furniture will be installed throughout and new and specially designed steel filing cabinets will be installed for records. All of the equipment going into the offices will be new, including typewriters, safes, vaults, etc.

Nothing will be taken from the present location at 92 William street except thirty odd thousand odd records, which is probably one of the most complete sets covering the lower section of the city; the goods will and best wishes of many clients and all of the enthusiasm that goes with an organization of young, enthusiastic men, many of whom have worked together for upward of 20 years.

The business was established in 1295 by Charles F. Noyes and is now running at the rate of about $25,000 a year in its turnover. It employs about 50 in the various executive departments and has, including those employed in buildings managed approximately 300 employees.

Mr. Noyes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Noyes of 18 Lincoln avenue, this city.
